How every ad is built

- Top 10%: a solid band that names the reader in full plain words ("For LLB holders working in HR").
- Middle: one picture that acts out the hook, one hook sentence that names the move into tech law, one reason.
- Bottom 15%: a big "Join for Rs 10" button with the price line: Rs 10 incl. GST, 3 live evenings, refundable.
- Different on purpose: each ad has its own picture, colour, typeface and layout. Only a carousel keeps one person across its cards.
- Pictures: Indian faces, light studio backdrops, one surreal idea each, in the style of the 7 reference posters you sent.
- Rules held: lawyers and LLB holders only; no income figure or viewer number on the face; no guarantee; no AI fear; no dashes.

Critic's read

Verdict: likely APPROVE on the face, fix first on two points.

1. The price line inside the button is small (it reads at about 21 px on a 1080 px ad). Ramanuj rejects anything small. Cut it to "Rs 10 · Refundable" at a larger size.
2. The one-line definition of tech law is on the carousels only. NCA ads did better with it on every face; add it to the singles or keep it in the primary text.

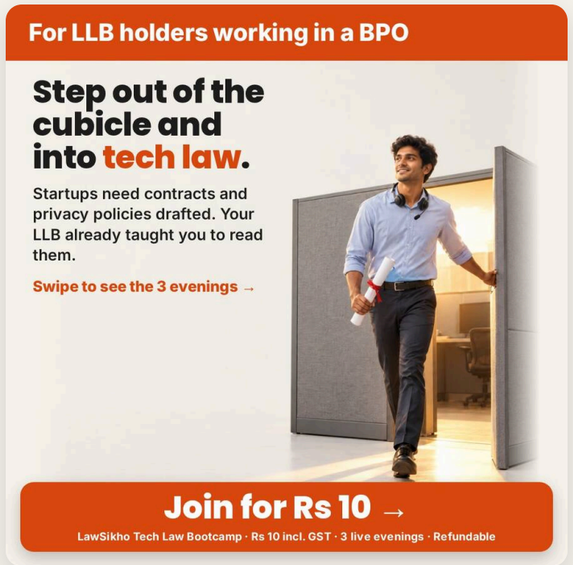

Half-asleep test (ad 02): who? LLB holders working in HR. What job? Tech law. Why yes? Rs 10, refundable, three live evenings.

Calls only Ramanuj can make

- Whether "LLB holders" outside law (01 to 05) count as lawyers for Tech Law (his 24 Sep rule: lawyers only).
- Budget, and whether C1 runs as its own campaign or inside one ABO with C2 to C4.
